

Contributors

Donald Braid is a Ph.D. candidate in Folklore at the Indiana University Folklore Institute. His research interests include folktale, personal experience narrative, and narrative theory. He recently completed fieldwork on narrative and the negotiation of cultural identity among the Travelling People of Scotland.

Ilana Harlow has a Ph.D in Folklore from Indiana University. She is Folk Arts Program Director at the Queens Council for the Arts.

Baqie Badawi Muhammad is a Ph.D. candidate in Folklore at Indiana University and a graphic designer. Her research interests include folklore and women's development in the Sudan.

Daniel B. Reed is a Ph.D. student in Folklore at Indiana University, and the 1995/1996 Laura Bolton Junior Fellow at the Archives of Traditional Music. His research interests include masked performance and interethnic relationships in Cote d'Ivoire.